Such an editorial is "Benefit of Drunkenness," by the New York Times; and here it is—

Razorbacks' Coach Addresses Hope Football Banquet Thursday

A BRYAN MEMORY

Thomsen Entertains With a Political Story From Nebraska

Coach Fred Thomsen of the University of Arkansas stressed the importance of receiving a college education—rather than being a grid hero—at a banquet at Capital hotel Thursday night honoring the Hope High School football team.

His talk was straight from the shoulder. It was well received by more than 100 persons, including members of the team, school officials and football boosters.

Before launching into his speech, Coach Thomsen related the following story:

"I went to school in Nebraska—but I'm a Democrat. In Nebraska we had few Democrats.

"I served as chairman of the Democratic club—and when the great William Jennings Bryan, a beloved Democrat and great orator, came through my town making campaign speeches I was called upon to introduce him.

"There were no suitable auditoriums from which to speak, so I picked out a vacant lot near an implement company. About the highest rostrum that I could select for Mr. Bryan to deliver his speech from, was a mature spreader.

"Before a large gathering, I climbed to the top of the mature-spreader and introduced the speaker the best way I knew how. Then Mr. Bryan climbed on the mature-spreader and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have made many speeches during my life. I have talked to great Democratic audiences from coast and coast and from Canada to Mexico."

"Then, gazing at the mature-spreader, he said: 'This is the first time I ever spoke from a Republican platform.'"

And Good Grid Season

Getting back to football, Coach Thomsen said that his Razorback team had a good season even if "we didn't win the Southwest Conference title."

"My team played only one bad game. That was the game Washington gave at Little Rock. That was the contest where I really wanted my team to 'show-off.' But then I am always disappointed at Little Rock."

"They played only one decent game at Little Rock and that was when we won the conference title in 1936. That year Arkansas finished 15th in the national rating. This year, although we didn't win the title, we finished 14th in the national ranking—so I think that is pretty good."

"Members of the Hope High School team should be thankful for the athletic program you are carrying on in Hope. You have a great coach in Hammond and you have the interest and co-operation of citizens of Hope which is evidenced by this gathering here this evening."

"Football teaches the youth of today other things than just winning the game. I think the four greatest benefactors from football can be listed in this order:

"Loyalty, determination, leadership and citizenship—all of which are necessary for a successful life in later years."

"Football, however, is secondary if you intend to go to college. Pick out a good school that you want to attend, get an education in your chosen line of work—and let football be second on your list. Because, in football, you are a hero today and a bum tomorrow. If you get an education, you are prepared for life."

"The University of Arkansas is a great institution. You can receive most any kind of higher learning there—in your chosen line. Arkansas ranks 10th among 168 members of the North Central Association."

"Several states may be bidding for the services of some of our football players. Football coaches will be around to see you. They are a selfish bunch—much as I hate to say that. But don't let them lie to you. Don't let them kid you. I know their story. It's a story they point for you—but it's not so rosy once they get you."

"As I said before, you are in football, a hero today and a bum tomorrow."

On the night of Aug. 7 a young man and his 2-year-old son, walking in a street of Lowell, Mass., were struck by an automobile and instantly killed. The wife and mother, seriously injured, is still under a physician's care. In the Middlesex Superior Court Nov. 17 the hit-and-run driver was tried by a judge, jury trial having been waived. The defendant was acquitted of the charge of manslaughter and that of leaving the scene of the accident. He was found guilty of drunkenness, drunken driving and of operating his car so as to endanger public safety, with a singular tenderness the conviction of drunkenness was placed on file. He got a suspended sentence of six months in jail and was fined $200 on each of the other charges.

So cheap is life in Lowell, the judge said that manslaughter must result from willful, wanton and reckless conduct. If Curry was so drunk that he could not formulate his will, can it be said that he is guilty of being willful, wanton and reckless?

The same rule applies to his leaving the scene of the accident. "He must have left knowingly. He must know what he is doing at the time." This is a sound doctrine. A drunken driver has only to plead drunkenness and he can kill and run away from the killing for less than the price of his automobile.

The common law was harsh to drunkenness and wouldn't admit it as an extenuation of offenses committed under its immediate influence. Old Coke sounds good yet:

A drunkard who is voluntarily damned hath no privilege thereby; whatever ill or hurt he doth, his drunkenness doth aggravate it.

If it can be shown to be great enough to be inconsistent with "unremediated killing," it will reduce the degree of murder. In Massachusetts—and we presume the judge knows his business—a person can get drunk and drive his car unlawfully, kill a couple of persons and seriously injure another unlawfully, drive away unlawfully from the place of his homicide, and all his punishment is a couple of fines and a suspended sentence. Hit, kill and run. You "don't remember." All you have to do is to claim your benefit of drunkenness.

When we recall that death, resulting from the negligent performance of a lawful act, negligent driving or negligent running of an engine, for instance, has been held to amount to manslaughter, it is our privilege as ignorant laymen to be not only surprised but scared by what seems a judicial acquittal of drunkards in homicide cases.

National Manufacturers Seek Revision of Wagner Labor Act

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The National Association of Manufacturers closed its annual convention Thursday with a call for revision of the Wagner Labor Relations Act. The last of three days sessions was entitled "Labor Day" and was attended by some 3,000 industrialists.

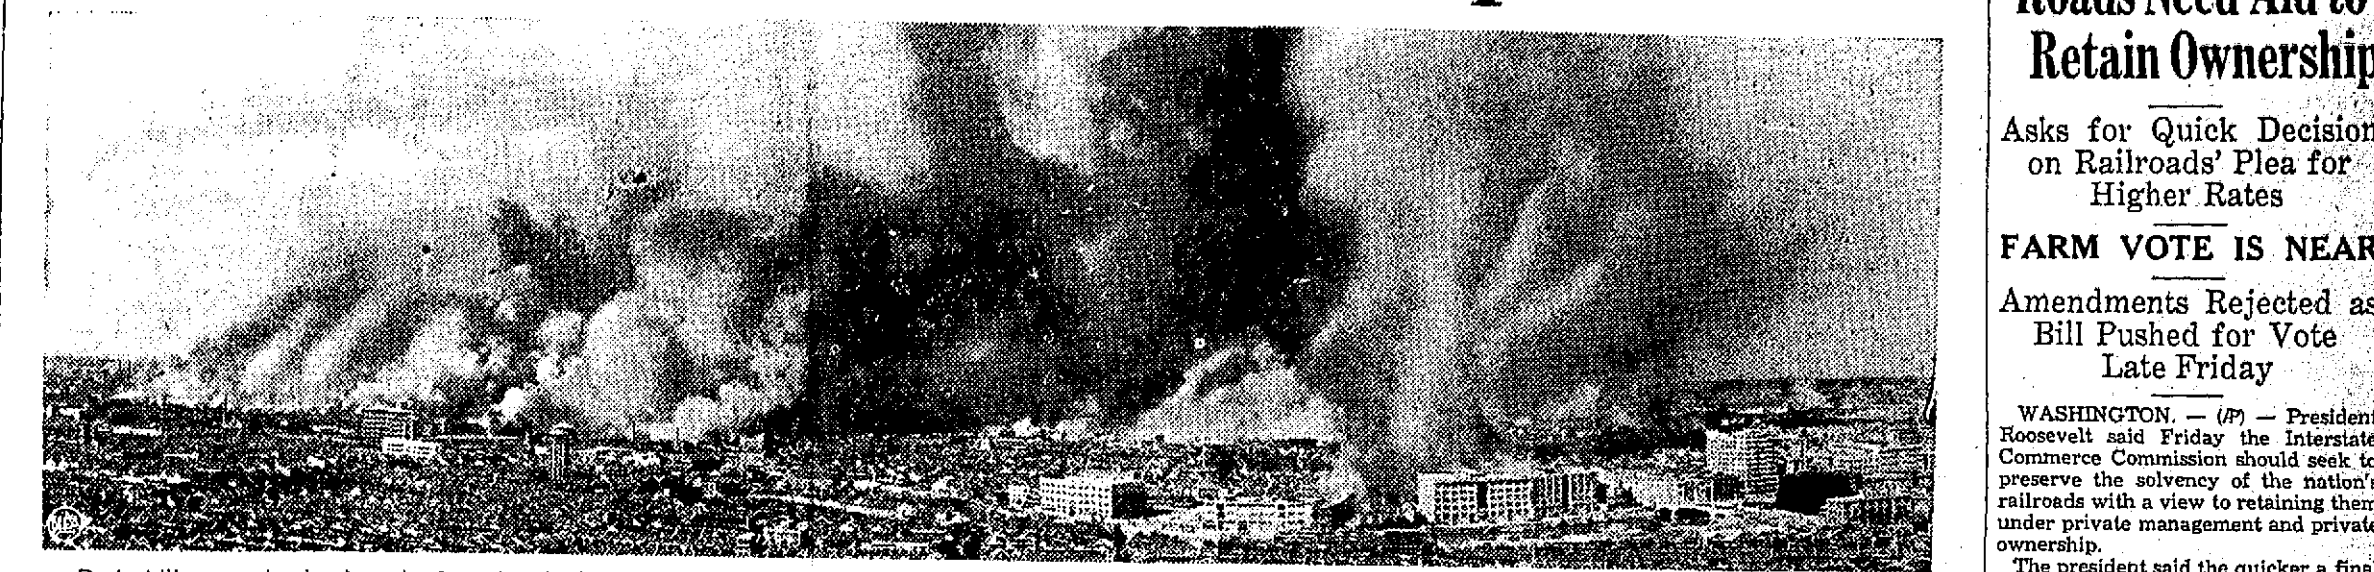

The demand for revision of labor laws followed a "closed session" at which Charles W. Fahy, lawyer for the National Labor Relations Board, opposed revision of the Wagner Act, asked the manufacturers to observe the letter of the law.

Previously Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, asserted labor strife had cost America $5,000,000,000 in 1937, "the worst and most costly period of labor turmoil in our history," and declared the government's attitude was "one of the

Spokesman for Invaders Declares that Nanking Was "in Process of Falling"—Japs Rush Through Southern Gate

A furious assault was launched against besieged Nanking Friday by 100,000 Japanese troops when the stubborn defenders of the walled Chinese capital city ignored an ultimatum to surrender.

A Japanese spokesman declared Nanking was "in process of falling."

A Domei Japanese news agency dispatch to Tokyo said Japanese troops already were pouring into the city through its captured southeastern gate.

Japanese reported the capture of Purple Mountain, dominating Nanking.

Walls that were 100 years old when Columbus set sail from Palos for America, walls that were 20 miles long and 30 feet thick at the base, are of little help in the last-ditch fight to bar the Japanese from Nanking.

True, those walls had largely been demolished in former wars, and even had they been intact they would have been no defense against modern artillery. But they guard the political shrine of the 25-year-old Chinese Republic.

Here Sun Yat Sen came to announce to the spirits of the departed Ming emperors the birth of the new republic.

Here also a magnificent mausoleum on the slope of Purple Mountain commemorated the founder.

Crippled Children Fund Drive Closes

All Mite Boxes Should Be Turned in by December 15

A quiet campaign for funds for the Arkansas Children's Home and Hospital has been in progress throughout the state since September.

Similar campaigns are being conducted in many other counties of the state, under the general direction of C. S. Hamby. The funds are being secured largely by means of mite boxes which were distributed to committee chairmen in various communities at the September meeting.

December 15 has been set as the date for closing out the full campaign throughout the entire state. All people who hold mite boxes are requested to bring them to First National Bank, which has been selected as the local depository of funds, by or on that date.

The Arkansas Children's Home and Hospital is located in Little Rock between Battery and Wolfe streets at 8th and 9th streets. During 1936 nearly 900 sick and crippled children were cared for in the hospital. Some maintenance money comes from the Legislature, some from nearly 40 Quorum Courts; but the major portion of support comes from gifts and donations.

There is, however, a mortgage of $12,000, and the mite-box campaign is part of plan to eliminate this indebtedness.

Persons desiring to contribute to Home and Hospital may see the chairman of the committee or leave their contribution at the First National Bank, or give to any of the following committee chairmen: Mrs. Joe Jackson, Washington, Mrs. C. Schooley, R. F. D. Hope; Miss Gladys Johnson, Hope, R. F. D.; Mrs. Ernest Cox, Fulton; Dr. H. K. Darnall, Columbus; C. G. Hays, R. F. D. Hope; Mrs. A. G. Zimmerman, R. F. D. Kidney Stone Removed, But Left Kidney Itself Is Saved

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Bailey underwent a major operation, lasting 1 hour 30 minutes, Friday for removal of a stone from his left kidney.

One hour after the operation two of the governor's four attending physicians issued the following statement:

"The patient is quite sick but unless complications develop he will make rapid recovery and will be out again within a short time."

Physicians described the operation as "a tedious one," and said it required more time than usual for such operations.

They reported finding a "slight infection" but said it was not necessary to remove the kidney.

Operation Required

LITTLE ROCK.—Apparently improving in health as the result of recent medical attention and an enforced rest, Governor Bailey suffered a setback Thursday and entered St. Vincent's infirmary.

He probably will undergo an operation Friday for a kidney ailment which has troubled him for nearly four months. It was believed that the operation would compel him to remain away from his desk for several weeks.

The governor entered the hospital November 17 in preparation for an operation but he responded to treatment so readily that physicians believed so readily that he would be able to extend his rest. He left the hospital four days later and went to Hot Springs and spent several days resting at a hotel. Physicians advised his return to St. Vincent's.

Remaining in the hospital only two days the second time, the governor returned to his home at 1518 Battery street. Anxious to give his personal attention to problems of his office, he resumed active duties November 28. Monday he was forced to abandon them again temporarily. He has not been able to return to his office since.

Court Removal Is Favored, Says C. C.

Secretary Points Out New Building Needed Regardless Location

Preliminary surveys indicate four-fifths of the people of Hempstead county would prefer to have the courthouse at Hope instead of Washington.

Secretary R. P. Bowen of Hope Chamber of Commerce told the Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow.

Explaining that he personally had resided in the county only since becoming secretary of the chamber, Mr. Bowen went on to say that his public appearances were merely as the agent of citizens and business interests long established here, and his role was only that of spokesman for the chamber's board of directors.

"There is a sentimental regret on behalf of the history and native life which made the old court site famous," the speaker continued, "but the changing economy of the day makes it good business to consider the courthouse removal to Hope now."

"It probably costs the people transacting business at the present courthouse $50,000 a year more than it would cost them if the building were located in Hope, which alone has more than half the assessed property valuation in the county."

"It will cost something to put up a new building, of course. Every intelligent person knows that it will. But so would it cost something to erect a new building in Washington—and a new building is needed regardless where it is located."

"Furthermore, building costs are rising, and every authority tells us construction can be undertaken more cheaply now than in probably many years to come."

Another club guest introduced Friday by President Robert M. Wilson was Joe Weisiger of the Missouri Pacific, a former Hope man.

2. Should a letter ever be signed "Hastily yours?"

3. When cards are bought and the names of a husband and wife signed, whose name is written first?

4. If a child's name is also signed in what order are the names written?

5. Should "yours" follow such closes as "sincerely" and "Lovingly?"

What would you do if—
You are sending a Christmas card to a friend who has never met your husband—
(a) Sign it with both your names?
(b) Sign your own name first?
(c) Sign "Alice Brown Jones?"

Answers
1. Not only permissible, but more in the spirit of Christmas.
2. No.
3. Either way. Usually the one doing the writing signs his name last.
4. Husband, wife, child.
5. That is the preferred form—though some people think it makes the closing more formal.

Best "What Would You Do?" solution—(a), though under some circumstances you might prefer (c). (Copyright 1937, NEA Service, Inc.)

Another Lofty War Illusion Is Broken

MAYBE we will have to revise our ideas about aviators, if we are to have any hope of getting the horror of war out of the world.

Exhibit A in the case is the book just written by Vittorio Mussolini, the dictator's son who is currently one of the ornaments of an Italian bombing squadron.

WAR, says young Mussolini, is "the quintessence of beauty"; it is "magnificent sport," particularly the bombing raids. Then he describes some of his adventures during the war in Ethiopia, to prove his point.

Speaking of a raid on a detachment of native cavalry, he writes:

"We arrived upon them unobserved and immediately dropped our loads of explosives. I remember that one group of horsemen gave me the impression of a budding rose as the bombs fell in their midst. It was exceptionally good fun, and they were easy to hit as we were not too high up. They made a perfect target."

And a little later he describes the bombing of an Ethiopian town called Adi-Ado. Incendiary bombs were dumped here, as follows:

"This was swell, and had a tragic but beautiful effect. Our best fun was trying to hit a large hut which stood in the middle of the town. I had to fly over it three times to make it. The third time I hit it and saw it begin to burn. Ethiopians leaped out and tried to escape. We started enough fire to heat half the globe."

It takes all sorts to make a world, of course, and this gallant young hero may be of a different stripe from ordinary military flyers. But what he writes is worth pondering over, because it does show how an aviator's-eye-view of war can differ from the view one gets on the ground.

That budding-rose effect, for instance, could be seen only from the air. At ground level one would miss the delicate unfolding beauty and see only the mangled bodies, the pain and the terror. And the boyish fun that can be had from trying to drop an incendiary bomb into somebody's home is not quite the sort of emotion that would be experienced by the people who were inside the home at the time. They might feel very differently about the affair.

NOW we have got into the habit of looking on aviators as dashing and romantic warriors. It has been said that they restore the essence of knightly chivalry to warfare. Much fine stuff has been written about their daring and about the way they have restored adventure to war.

It is about time we revised our ideas. Aviators make war on defenseless folks; they kill women and children, burn houses that are full of non-combatants, and find "exceptionally good fun" in dismembering people who can't hit back. If there is anything knightly or romantic about that, it is hard to think what it can be.

Mussolini's callous jubilation may help us change our opinions.

Alimony Absurdity

IT is a little bit hard to work up a whole lot of sympathy or indignation over the lot of either party to a divorce suit, because the troubles which arise in divorce court are troubles which people bring on themselves. Nevertheless, the matter of alimony does occasionally call for a little straight forward denouncing.

In Connecticut, for instance, a lady who is suing for divorce demands alimony of $1000 a month pending trial of the suit. Her husband objects, saying that her income is $45,000 a year and she does not need the alimony. She replies that he is mistaken; last year her income was a scant $30,000.

A case like that makes one wonder why we continue to put up with the institution of alimony at all, except in cases where there are small children to support. For this seems to be the reductio ad absurdum of the idea that an able-bodied woman is entitled to fat sums from a man simply because she once accorded him the privilege of supporting her.

Syndrome, a Collection of Symptoms, Classifies Type of Nervous Disease

This is the second in a series in which Dr. Fishben discusses diseases of the nervous system, their cause, effect and treatment.

(No. 393)

The nervous system is one of the most complicated in its disturbances of any of the portions of the human body. Some diseases which result from disturbances of the nerves are almost incomprehensible to the average person until the mechanism of the nervous system is understood.

In some of these diseases, the body loses strength. In others, one may be constantly sleepy and in still others, certain portion of the body refuse to function or function incorrectly.

Sometimes there is a combination of the various symptoms which physicians classify merely by the name of the disease which happened first to be observed. These various portions of the tissues concerned, or a sudden rise in the temperature of the tissues.

In this condition also, poisonings of various kinds and infections with such due to disturbance of the spinal cord on just one side—a stab or bullet wound, or, more frequently, a tumor, or infection of the spine with syphilis.

Careful tests are made of the sensation in the skin for heat, cold and pain below the place where the lesion is supposed to be. Tests are made of the various reflexes. The disturbance thus may be located accurately.

Then the X-ray may reveal signs of the tumor or of a destruction of the bone or of some other lesion in the spinal column. Surgical operation may then alleviate the trouble.

Another common syndrome is the one known as Meniere's syndrome. This is usually due to some disturbance of the nerves of hearing and of the little canals in the brain which give us our sense of position in space.

The person who has this syndrome has difficulty with hearing, ringing in the ears and much dizziness. Secondly, there may be sweating, nausea and vomiting. Sometimes there is a sudden rise in the temperature of the tissues.

If the attacks are frequent and severe, it is customary for the doctor

HONEY-BEE GIRL—Indian; member of Harry's party.
HARRY JONES—pioneer; member Harry's party.

Yesterday, apprehensive lest the strange lost people harm them, Bob and Melissa plan to escape. And in their exhaustion of the moment they fall asleep.

CHAPTER XX

JUST at dawn a weird chanting and hallowing awakened "Lissa." "Bob! Get up, dear Bob! It's starting already."

The day's festivities were indeed under way. The white couple had removed only their shoes at bedtime, and so were peering out in a moment or two. Already a great pile of wood had been assembled near the chieftain's house and other wood barrels were seen coming from far and near. Apparently every villager, old and young, was contributing to the fuel supply and was making it an occasion for song.

The sun had not actually appeared as yet but the dawn was bright gray. It would be 9 o'clock or so, Bob observed, before the actual fireball itself could appear over their horizon. "This was because of the sheer cliffs that hemmed in this kingdom to protect and isolate it from the outside world. Studying the light, Bob decided it must be nearly 8 o'clock even now; they had slept very late, but they were refreshed. "We're getting off to a good start, anyway," he said to "Lissa." "I hope I can remember some of these chants."

IN due time a red cliff top to the westward was suddenly illuminated, as if a gigantic stage spotlight had been turned on. In that moment a new sound dominated the valley, and the course of action everywhere was changed.

First a chorus of grunts—the same tom-toms Bob noted, that Hopi Indians used—reverberated throughout the canyon. It was a penetrating bass noise, alarming, heraldic, of great volume.

OOM-OOM. OOM-OOM. OOM-OOM. The rhythm changed soon. OOM-OOM. (pause) OOM-OOM. (pause) OOM-OOM. This was continued for perhaps a quarter hour—two beats one, then two again, and repeat.

"Remember what I told you, Bob Barry!" "Lissa was becoming alarmed. "If you love me you'll try to stop this senseless business." Bob nodded, in great earnestness. "But maybe I can't, darling! Our own lives may be endangered if I try. The maidens may actually want to be sacrificed. I certainly do not. This is a delicate matter, and I'm trying to figure a way out of here gracefully—and safely."

"It's murder, Bob, and you know it."

OOM-OOM. OOM. OOM-OOM. No more wood was brought, but all were assembling by now. And from a number of houses came men in fantastic costumes of skins and paint, with all manner of ceremonial objects dangling from them. Without any sort of preliminary, these men, evidently high priests of some form signaled to the drummers and the rhythm again changed. Now it became a one, one-two-three beat: OOM-OOM-OOM-OOM. OOM-OOM-OOM-OOM, with double emphasis on the first, done rather slowly at the outset but gradually getting a little faster. It seemed to be perfect time for the extraordinary dances begun by the costumed ones.

THE priests stamped and hopped and chanted and rattled the sticks they held, and soon the villagers all were chanting too, to make a rumbling background of sound. This continued for at least half an hour, but stopped so abruptly that "Lissa" almost jumped. The chieftain of the brown people walked to "Lissa" and Bob. He made motions.

"This is the moment!" Bob whispered.

Robert Barry swallowed, then took a deep breath. He was still without much hope, and he didn't dare offend these people lest he and "Lissa" themselves be sacrificed. But he determined to try the biggest bluff in his career.

He turned ostentatiously to the sun, and mumbled a long jargon. He winked at "Lissa," and raised his hands to the sun. She did likewise. They sank to their knees. "Act it out!" Bob mumbled. "Lissa was trembling."

Ignoring the four maidens, who had been brought out tied hand and foot, Bob kept pointing to the sun and talking steadily to the chief, gesticulating as impressively as he knew how, but actually without meaning. He kept up this mumbo-jumbo for two or three minutes.

Then he looked imperiously at the chief and began a serious sign saucers. Brother stops yelling for endless drinks of water after being tucked in for the night. Oh, yes, they are very, very good.

But still it is not quite perfect. This kind of "goodness" smacks of the Pharisee who stood on the corner and called to heaven to note his virtue. "Behold, oh Lord, I thy servant have killed no one. I have not stolen, or coveted, or gossiped about my neighbor who didn't pay his bills." "I, Johnny, have not pulled the cat's tail, Santa, or copied my neighbor's work."

Only Negatively Good

This isn't half of it. All this is negative goodness. It is doing what one should do anyway, without being bribed.

What Santa Claus expects, I am sure, is more on the Samaritan order, doing active good for other people. Making friend, enemy and stranger alike feel better. Turning our lazy hands and indifferent hearts to giving a fellow being a lift.

Christmas is coming. Most children have the "gimmie" at this time of the year. You can't blame them, but you can suggest that they earn their bonuses. Turn their thoughts to other children who are less fortunate. Show them how to make little gifts, for instance, for the stranger in the neighborhood, or the little chap whose mama works all day long and will come home late on Christmas Eve with a hastily bought toy or two, too tired to trim a tree or cook a turkey.

There is scarcely a child who doesn't live within two stones' throw of some boy or girl who needs friendship and a feeling of being in things at Christmas time. Here is an opportunity to be "good" in earnest. Both spiritually and psychologically it is good for the soul. Selfishness gets in so many home-runs at Christmas time, that something should be done about it.

Training Opportunity

Last we forgot, the whole Christmas season is a proving ground for many worthwhile lessons. At no other time of the year are children so alert, so impressionable and so plastic. Anticipation, part of our old friend "interest motive," makes it so. In this mood, children are approachable and receptive. What an opportunity for parents to do a little gentle training on the side.

Generosity should loom large now on the child's horizon. Let each one work and plan to give, even in a small way, rather than prattle constantly about what he wants and his chances for getting it. Exchange has become the keyword for Christmas. No get, no give. What a nuisance and what a pity! There is no harm in exchange up to a point, but there are higher and better motives for giving and receiving.

SUDDENLY then the chief issued a command to his people. Six or eight hurried away, while the assembly waited. To fill in the gap, Bob orated meaninglessly to the sun. When the messengers returned with live rabbits, live snakes, and other small animals, "Lissa's" curiosity popped. She hadn't spoken for nearly half an hour.

"What is it, Bob?" she whispered. "What's happening?" "I'm playing a hunch. Keep acting."

Bob signed a bit more to the chief. Then, surprisingly, he took one of the wild rabbits, killed it, skinned it with his pocket knife, all with elaborate ceremony.

Each piece of the carcass he placed on the great pile of wood, but he presented the dressed meat portion to the chief, instructing him to cook it. Then, Bob ostentatiously cut the things that bound the maidens, and set them free. He signed to the chieftain and folded his arms, standing beside "Lissa" with imperious mien.

The chief, duly awed by it all, shouted excitedly then to his people, and the fire was lighted. Quickly there was a frenzy of yelling and jubilant dancing.

"What is it, Bob? Tell me! What did you do?" "Lissa clung to her lover's arm."

"I don't know where we go from here, sweetheart, but I think we bluffed that one through. I told them we were messengers from the real sun god, and that he commanded an end of human sacrifice. I said this tribe is small now, no more people must be sacrificed from it. The maidens must fear children instead. In substitute, I explained, a live beast of the fields should be killed, and its skin thrown on the fire, and the good meat eaten as a symbol of feasting and plenty. The sun god, I said, wants eternal happiness to reign here, not pain and blood and death."

She shivered a little, and snuggled closer, fascinated by the amazing pagentry before them. "O-oh Bob!" she murmured. "That's the way I felt too, 'Lissa darling.'"

Rib-Cracker Nell Kelly Puts a New Wallop Into the Films

HOLLYWOOD.—Daughters of bank presidents seldom go into vaudeville. But Nell Kelly's father's bank at Memphis collapsed in 1914, so she started out to see the world through a mask of burnt cork. That was when Miss Kelly was 4 years old.

Her elder sisters, Valenda and Flo, got up a blackface act and included Nell for comedy relief. The latter said, "I was supposed to sing, but I really didn't have to do anything to get laughs because I was so funny looking."

When Valenda dropped out of the act, after several years, Flo and Nell washed their faces and became a harmony team. "And, boy—were we terrible!" Nell recalled. "But that was before the depression, and an act didn't have to be so hot. Flo had talent—she's a dance director at the Roxy in New York now."

"But I was a crazy kid, all elbows and knees, and skinny as a rail. When I was 18 I tried to get into a Fanchon and Marco chorus, but I was so thin they made me a comedy principal and we played Orpheum time for nine months."

Red Hair—This Week

You're not likely ever to meet a girl with less vanity than Nell Kelly. She says her photographs flatter her. Naturally, she hopes the movie cameras will be equally kind, for she has a contract with Paramount and will start her screen career with a part specially written for her in "College Swing."

She has red hair. "At least, it's red this week," she said. "I don't know what the studio will do with it. Every time the style of my hair is changed it gets burned. Maybe I'm hot-headed."

The Kelly mouth is larger than average, but she hopes it won't be featured last fans consider her an imitator of Martha Raye. Her architecture is more angular than Miss Raye's, although she isn't as thin as she used to be.

She's strictly low-comedy, and violent. Night club masters of ceremony everywhere wince at the mere mention of her name. "I didn't mean to hurt 'em, but it was part of the act," she explained. "You see, I'd sing a love song to the MC and finish up by swatting him on the chest. This always got a big laugh, because I can sock. But after a few nights, with three shows a night, they'd have enough time breathing and would have to be taped up for cracked ribs."

I even swatted Rudy Vallee. I wanted to cut out that part of it, but he insisted. No, I didn't break any of his ribs, but you can't say I didn't try."

After playing almost every city in the United States in vaudeville, Miss Kelly was graduated to musical comedy. Clowned in Earl Carroll's "Vanities." Another show was "Boob-Boo," which featured another red-head named Jeanette MacDonald.

Nell was breaking ribs along the Pacific Coast when the opportunity came to play one of the Sunday night shows at the Trocadero—the Hollywood show shop where entertainers fight for a chance to work for nothing because they'll be seen by movie executives.

Nell Kelly was seen, all right. She did her Salvation Army number, with the big bass drum. Also her Garbo imitation, wherein the anemic Swede does a bit of hot truckin'. Agents by the dozens telephoned her next day.

Gets a Dollar Dally

Unflattering imitations are what the comedienne does best. She's especially eager for a chance to burlesque an operatic death scene because she always has been tickled by the way dying is prolonged in the classical medium—the drooping tenor, although neatly spitted on the villain's sword, warbles for 10 minutes and finally staggers up to reach a high note before expiring.

Miss Kelly lives with her mother in Hollywood. Mrs. John Alexander Kelly has chaperoned her daughter for years, and also takes care of the money. The actress gets an allowance of a dollar a day. Doesn't know, or want to know, how much money she has.

The Postman

He comes of mornings and afternoons, bearing a weight of joy and woe. But more than the pack upon his back. Is the light he carries through rain or snow. A look in his eyes of happiness. Of peace with the world again and again. Long street by street with willing feet He seeks the doors of his fellow men. I spoke to him once of the light: I said, "Are you always as glad as you seem to be?" And he answered, "Yes, I must confess, I am always happy, life's good to me. I have my job—I have some debts. But I'm paying them out and it won't be long. And then I'll be free of that load, you see." And he trudged on humming a cheerful song. Glad for his work and glad for his pay. And glad for the wind and sun in his eyes. Contented with what life has to give—How rich is he, how wise!—G. M. C.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

Christian Fellowship
Text: 1 John 1:1-7; Revelation 21:1-7

Christianity began in fellowship. Jesus drew to Him earnest men capable of devotion and interested in righteousness; and these men, inspired by His personality and teaching went forth to tell others of the Master whom they had found, and brought them to Jesus.

He taught these new disciples by example and through living with them from day to day. They met upon a plane of humility. He asked from them no obsequious devotion; only the loyalty of those who responded to the teaching of love and grace.

The Christian church never comes nearer to its ideal, no matter how large it may grow or how extensive and varied its boundaries, than when it fulfills the simple principles of its early fellowship and brings men into relationships of love and comradeship.

This idea of fellowship is not confined to our lesson or to any one interpreter of the life and words of Jesus. John, in his first Epistle, from which part of our lesson is taken, has given the very highest expression of the reality and privileges of Christian love. "If we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship with another."

Paul interprets the Christian experience in exactly the same way. Its nature and its climax are found in love, which is the theme of Paul's greatest sermon in the brief 13th chapter of 1 Corinthians. Paul lays stress always upon fellowship in the church. The church is a "household of faith." Its members have the close relationship in an ideal church of those in a common family.

All love is mystical in its nature. That is, there is something about it that is instinctive and intuitive, deeper than words and actions; though love would not be very real if it did not find expression in words and in actions.

This mystic bond of fellowship in Christ binds us to Him, and binds Christians to one another in a world where Jesus is no longer seen as the disciples saw Him and knew Him. The "Testament" commands those Christians who had not seen Jesus but who loved Him.

That's the real love; not the response to the outward form, but the yielding of heart and mind to the teaching and example of Christ, so coming to know Him that He becomes the environment of one's very being. This is what Paul meant when he said, "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. Old things have passed away. Behold, all things are become new." Christ becomes the true spiritual environment of the sincere disciple.

This earthly fellowship with Christ is the symbol and forecast of a larger heavenly fellowship, in which the

Evangelist Speaks at the Tabernacle

Rev. and Mrs. Bird H. Campbell to Be Here for Sunday

The Rev. Bird H. Campbell, an evangelist of Dallas, Texas, will speak at both the morning and night services at Hope Gospel Tabernacle Sunday. Evangelist Campbell is accompanied by his wife who will sing and play during the services. They have recently held successful revival campaigns in Dallas, Fort Worth and sections of the lower Rio Grande valley.

The Rev. Mr. Campbell is a business man turned preacher, having held the position of supervisor of new dealerships for Frigidaire corporation before entering the ministry.

The evangelist's subject for the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning will be, "Purpose of Heart," and for the night service beginning at 7:30, "Three Famous Last Nights." Mrs. Campbell will sing and play the piano-accompanied in the services and will speak to the young people at 6:30.

These evangelists will be in Hope for only the one day and an invitation is extended to the general public to hear them.

Quiet and orchestra music will add to the enjoyment of the services throughout the day.

memorates Sun Yat Sen and his services to the Republic that is now almost prostrate before Japan. Japanese infantry have tramped through the small compound which was sacred to the memory of the Father of His Country, Sun Yat Sen. Here they are reported to have set up heavy artillery which would command the city, seven miles away.

Literary Center Also

Nanking was a city at least 800 years before Christ was born. It was China's capital under the early Ming emperors, who abandoned it in the 14th century for a new capital at Peking as a better protection against the Mongols. But the city itself remained impregnable, and withstood many sieges. Here came the New England clippers to trade for "nankeen," the local cotton cloth which was a staple article of trade in New England. But Nanking was not entirely a city of trade. It was the literary center of China as well.

In 1850, however, the city was taken during the Taiping revolt, and held by those religious zealots for a long time until Premier Li Hung Chang, aided by the American General Ward and the British Gordon was able to recapture it. Much of its ancient glory disappeared at that time, including all but a remnant of the famous I-wreath. Pagoda of which Longfellow sang in his poem "Keramos."

Remnant Capital in 1927

Nanking, many of its ancient glories vanished, and even the venerable Ming tombs, approached by long avenues fringed with great stone figures of animals, had a shabby look. Much of the space enclosed by the ancient walls had become vacant, with lovely old marble bridges standing in the midst of open fields once used by people of the past to cross streams that no longer exist.

Then the Nationalist government of Chiang Kai-Shek made Nanking again the capital in 1927. The city had a new birth. American architects and city planners, Henry Killam Murphy and Ernest P. Goodrich, were called in to plan a modern city which should be a world wonder.

Many of the new government buildings had already risen. Their fate under a Japanese occupation is questionable. Parks, recreation grounds, swimming pools, widened streets, were planned. Five airports sent planes roaring into the air, and the atmosphere was one of youth and progress. It was to express in stone and brick the spirit of a China reborn. The population rose in a few years from 600,000 to nearly a million.

On Purple Mountain, above the tomb of Sun Yat Sen, stands the National Observatory, and the blue and yellow "White House" of the Chinese Republic lies in the shadow of one of the most powerful radio stations in the world.

Chiang Kai-Shek is reported to have left the capital, either for safety or to make a last-minute inspection of the desperate defense lines. On Purple Mountain there are spirits, spirits which to the Chinese are vitally alive, the spirits of the Ming Emperors, of Sun Yat Sen, and perhaps even the spirit of the Chinese Republic.

ideals of love and truth and righteousness will find their fulfillment. We live in a world which, despite many loving and devoted souls, is still marred with sin and hate. But in this other heavenly world there will be the society of those whose hearts and lives are purified and who live in the glory of a great experience from which all evil passion and hate have vanished.

We call that heaven, and it would be a very real heaven if we could produce anything like that on this earth.

"The Gifts of Christian Living" will be the subject of the evening message at 7:30 o'clock.

The church school will meet at 10 a. m. with a class for every age. Come to this service of teaching. It is urged that a large attendance be present Sunday, as the assignment to the different classes for the annual white Christmas will be made. It is important that each group know what it is supposed to furnish. The White Christmas program will be given in a special service Sunday night December 19 at 7:30.

The Intermediate and Young People's Epworth Leagues will meet at 6:45 o'clock.

You are cordially invited to all of these services of worship.

Superintendent Donald Moore has the Primary Department working in an enrollment and attendance contest. The prize being a turkey dinner with all the fixings.

The Sunday school opens its session promptly at 9:45. Try to be on time, so that the morning worship service may begin on time at 10:30 a. m. When we begin on time we always begin on time we always dismiss by 12 noon.

The morning sermon continues the series on the many-sided life of Christ and is titled "The Wonderful Christ." A part of the sixth verse of the ninth chapter of Isaiah reads: "Unto us a child is born; unto us a Son is given."

And His Name shall be called Wonderful. . . . The name "Wonderful," with which the sermon is concerned, is but one of the two hundred fifty-six names which are given to Jesus the Christ in the Book of Life.

"Wonderful"—what an appropriate name it is for Jesus. The world has been filled with the wonders of nature, with wonders of workmanship and with wonders of personality, but Jesus Christ towers unique, supernatural, and transcendent above them all.

The subject for the evening sermon is "Jesus, The Pioneer of Life." New and modern translations of the Bible have unfolded before us new frontiers of meaning for many of its chapters and verses. The description of Jesus in the Moffat translation as "the pioneer of life" is one of the greatest insights into the meaning of scripture which modern Bible translators have given the world. We see Him as One who pushes back all horizons, as One who blazes trails. What a wealth of meaning there is in that phrase "the pioneer of life" when it is applied to Jesus.

You are cordially invited to each service here Sunday: Sunday school at 9:45; morning worship at 10:30 and evening worship at 7:30.

HOPE GOSPEL TABERNACLE
Bert Webb-Pastor

A fine attendance was present last Sunday in spite of the cold weather. Let us not permit any drops in attendance during the month of December. We are looking for you next Sunday at 8:45.

Rev. J. H. Campbell, an evangelist from Dallas, Texas, will speak at the eleven o'clock service on "Purpose of Heart" or "Can a Man Really Live an Overcoming Life Today?" He will also speak at the 7:30 evangelistic service on "Three Famous Last Nights." The Rev. Mr. Campbell is an evangelist of unusual ability who with his wife has recently held successful campaigns in many southern cities including Dallas, Fort Worth, and the Lower Rio Grande Valley. They will be in Hope for only the one day and we are urging the people of Hope to plan to hear them.

Mrs. Campbell is a musician and will play and sing in the services. It is expected that quiet and orchestra music will add much to the entire day of service, next Sunday.

Christ's ambassadors meet at 6:30 with Mrs. Campbell, wife of the evangelist as speaker.

rom. You will be out of luck if you don't get an education. Don't let athletics go to your head. It will get you every time.

"After completing your higher education—no matter where you go—most of you will return to Arkansas. You will make your home here, among friends and relatives. I would like to see all of you come to your State University. I will do my best to help you. But if you go to some other school, I will hold no grudge against you."

"In closing I want to remind you again—get a college education—let athletics be secondary."

Other Speakers

Preceding the guest speaker, brief talks were made by Miss Beryl Henry, W. K. Lemley, W. S. Atkins and Coach Foy Hammons. Leo Robins served as master of ceremonies and introduced all of the speakers.

Miss Henry expressed thanks for loyalty and co-operation on the part of the team, Coach Foy Hammons, and to the football boosters of Hope.

W. K. Lemley praised the University of Arkansas as a great institution for higher learning and for its rapid climb in athletics. He said that Arkansas held a wonderful future for the youth of today.

W. S. Atkins said that he had been unfortunate in not being able to attend many games—but that he had kept up with the record of the team. He congratulated the team and Coach Hammons, and pledged his aid and support for the best interest of members of the squad.

Coach Foy Hammons expressed appreciation for the spirit and loyalty shown on the part of the team and to supporters of high school athletics.

Christmas Dinner

It is not too early to start planning the Christmas dinner; that is, if the mother of the family wants to enjoy the day as much as the rest of the household. Planning the big dinner well ahead of time will save many steps on Christmas day.

For the center piece for the Christmas dinner, Miss Gertrude E. Conant, extension nutritionist of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, suggests polished red apples and green leaves. A layer of green pine, cedar or holly leaves around the edge of a large plate or round tray of apples, will give a festive appearance to the table.

A clear soup, fruit cocktail, or tomato juice may be used for the first course.

Turkey, goose, duck or chicken are suitable for the meat course. If goose is used, it should be steamed a few minutes so the down will rub off easily. Wash in soda water and rinse well. Cut a clove of garlic and use to rub the inside of the goose before stuffing it. Use raw apples cut in one-fourth cubes, stale bread crumbs, a little grated onion and sifted dried sage for the stuffing. Moisten the materials with broth made by cooking the giblets in water to cover. Use the chopped giblets in the gravy.

The goose may be garnished with small apples cooked in a colored syrup, Miss Conant suggests. If the apple garnish is preferred, a potato stuffing should be used in the goose. Her recipe for the stuffing calls for 3 cups hot mashed potatoes, 2 cups stale bread crumbs, 1/4 cup butter, or substitute, 1 egg, well beaten, 2 T. onion, 1/2 each of salt and pepper, 1/2 t powdered sage, and 1/2 cup milk. Melt the butter and stir in the bread crumbs until they have absorbed all the fat. Add the onion and seasonings and stir into the mashed potatoes. Then add the milk and beaten egg. Stuff the fowl loosely.

A green vegetable and a yellow vegetable should be used to give color. Sweet potatoes, green beans and scalloped turnips will be a good combination. The salad should reflect the Christmas colors of red and green. It may be made of chopped cabbage and red pimientos with chopped green sweet peppers or chopped parsley for the green color. The dessert may be any kind the family prefers, from apple mince or pumpkin pie with cheese to ice cream and cake.

Making Clothes

Home demonstration club women and 4-H club girls in Hempstead county who are carrying demonstrations in clothing have found a few inexpensive pieces of equipment held a great deal in producing professional results.

An iron and pressing cloth are essential, particularly when handling wool or silk. Some basting can be avoided by using an iron and pressing cloth for straight seams and folds on cotton materials, suggests Miss Sue Marshall, extension specialist in clothing and household arts of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. One-half yard of canvas, drilling, or very heavy muslin can be used for a pressing cloth. A piece of wool flannel is better for woolen material as it allows the steam to pass through more readily, the specialist said.

Another piece of equipment is a pressing roll, convenient for pressing leaves seams, or any seam that might leave an impression on the right side of the material after being pressed. The roll can be made from a rolled magazine or a 12-inch length of broom stick, covered with several thicknesses of flannelette or toweling, and a final layer of muslin. The ends of the roll must be stitched securely, but it is not necessary to fasten the side seam, according to Miss Marshall.

A pressing cushion supplements the ironing board for curved seams, for shrinking in the fullness in the caps of sleeves, and for pressing the armholes. It is made of heavy sateen or drilling and firmly stuffed with sawdust which must be renewed occasionally when it becomes soft from use. Directions for making the cushion are given by Miss Marshall.

Cut two circles of sateen, drilling, or heavy muslin 6 inches in diameter and a straight strip 3 inches by 18 inches of the same material. Join the ends of the strip to make a circle. Divide the strip and the circles into four equal parts, baste and stitch the circular pieces to the 3-inch strip leaving an opening for filling with sawdust. Remove the basting thread, turn right-side out, and stuff firmly with dry seasoned sawdust. Overcast the edges together.

FARMERS-TO ARMS!

a pen like this may sign your doom - - unless you use it first!

De feat The Federal Wage and Hour Bill

"Disastrous to the Welfare of the People." —Knoxville Journal

"A Dangerous Principle." —Walter Lippmann, N. Y. Herald Tribune

"Ruinous to the Farmer." —Atlanta Constitution

Farmers! Don't be deceived! The planners of the Wage-and-Hour Bill now before Congress claim to exempt farm workers from its provisions. But no power on earth can exempt you, your family, your livelihood, from the vicious provisions of this Bill.

It proposes to give the tax-supported Department of Labor final authority over wages and hours of private industry—although industry must find the money for both taxes and payrolls. Industry doesn't object to reasonable regulation for the promotion of its workers' welfare. But such a bill must be correctly drawn, must be a part of the American system of doing business—which this bill is not.

What will this Bill mean to you? It has been condemned by farmers and farm organizations from coast to coast. Why?

1 Higher wages must mean higher prices for manufactured products (for example, the increased cost of fertilizer is estimated as high as $5.00 per ton.) Another stab at your pocketbook!

2 Processors of farm products, forced to pay higher wages, will cut costs wherever they can. They will insist on lower prices for your products. Another cut in your income!

3 You will have to pay more for everything, yet you will have to sell at world prices, which will not be artificially increased.

4 When wages and hours are fixed for grain elevators, creameries, cotton gins, canning plants—the next step will be agriculture. They'll get you next!

A national economic authority has termed this Bill "A brake on industry, a plague on agriculture, a calamity for labor, a blight on recovery."

This measure can not be enforced without discriminating against the South, and in many cases the earnings of the wage earners will be lowered rather than increased.

Thank Heaven—America is awake! Will you join this righteous crusade, Tonight—act to stop this super-Government by bureaus.

Take time today to write your representatives in Congress—Senator Hattie W. Carraway, Senator John E. Miller, and Congressman Wade Kitchens—and tell them you believe federal wage and hour legislation un-American, dangerous and a threat to your living, that you expect them to vote against it.

Your message is needed. Act now. Southern Mid-Western Industry Committee

—Adv.

Three Fascist States After Loot and Power Is Real Story Behind 'Anti-Communism' Pact

If another war comes it may well have its origin in the scene pictured below, enacted in Rome as envoys of three nations signed a pact—obviously aimed at Russia—pledging unceasing efforts to eradicate Communism. Shown are Germany's Joachim von Ribbentrop (1) signing; Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano (2), and Japan's Matsuoka Hotta (3).

By MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service European Manager

LONDON—Germany, Italy and Japan have bound themselves into a pact whose ostensible purpose is to fight the spread of Communism.

Communism is a blessed cover for their designs. If there had been no Communism, they would have been constrained to invent it. No one of the three allies is threatened by Communism.

In Germany and Italy today a declared Communist stands good chance of execution or if a very long imprisonment, in Japan, not only Communism, but Socialism and even trades unionism have been kept down by the military clique.

The new partnership of three powerfully armed states, in which the people have no voice in their destinies, has within it wide implications which may affect the history of the world for a good many years to come.

Italy Not Satisfied

1—Japan's war upon China without declaring war is nothing but an enterprise to gobble up the best parts of China, particularly those great coal and iron deposits.

Italy was her conquest of Ethiopia is not a satisfied state. She wants more power in the Mediterranean and means to get it—if possible.

Germany is, of course, conducting a thumping campaign for the return of her former African colonies, particularly those England holds.

Trouble in Brazil

2—Interference in the affairs of other states. The new allies loudly proclaim that the Bolsheviks are constantly stirring up trouble in other states. The Fascists have repeatedly said Fascism was not an article for export. So have the Nazis.

But all over Europe, where there are Germans, there are Nazi nests and in many states laws have been passed to stop their machinations.

Up to now the most glaring example of interference is in Spain where Italian and German "volunteers" have largely won the victories for Franco, the rebel leader.

There is a danger that some day something of the sort may happen in Latin America. Then Uncle Sam will sit up and take notice, brushing the dust off the Monroe Doctrine. In the old kaiserian days Germany always had a covetous eye on the rich southern states of Brazil where thousands of Germans were settled. Those Germans are still there and most of them are now Nazis. And now Brazil has a dictator . . . and a government leaning to Fascism.

3—Threat to England and France and danger to Russia. The new alliance means that in any war, Russia would be engaged on two fronts—Germany to the west and Japan on the east. Germany covets the Ukraine with its wheat, coal and oil, and its outlet to the Black Sea.

Japan covets Russian possessions which front on the Pacific. It loathes the idea of the Russians having in Vladivostok a port where submarines and airplanes could imperil Japanese fleets and Japanese cities.

The threat to France is no less real. It will be greater if the Fascists and the Nazis succeed in putting France on top in Spain. Then, in case of war, France would find herself threatened on three fronts—Germany, Italy and Spain. A hostile Spain, plus a hostile Italy, would make untenable the Mediterranean route between France and her North African possessions.

Finally, there is the threat to Britain. A hostile Italy and Spain block her way through the Mediterranean just as effectively as they do France's. Outside of the American, the British naval fleet is still the strongest in the world. But if Britain had simultaneous trouble with the three gangster states, her navy would not be adequate.

It must be remembered that Britain has things that the three allies want. Germany wants her colonies in Africa back.

had clear vision of several hundred feet," said Bolin. "Other tests on highways at a speed of 80 miles an hour proved that we could stop our car before reaching an object looming several hundred feet ahead."

Legion officials suggested that the lights be raised for night driving and that drivers be required to dim their lamps upon meeting other cars. Officers said there was no law requiring drivers to dim their lights.

"If the lights are kept low to discourage fast driving," another Legion officer declared, "we believe governors should be placed on all automobiles."

The Legion has always and will continue to sanction any safety move, the officials said. They said there appeared to be a need for raising headlights.

worst stumbling blocks to a national get-together."

The association adopted a report by its Board of Directors, which said:

"Government should protect the right to engage in lawful strikes by lawful means, but its primary obligation is protection of the right to work."

The report urged that both federal and state governments prohibit not only unions but business corporations from making political contributions. It also urged that unincorporated labor organizations such as most unions, and unincorporated association of employers, be legally responsible and suable in the courts.

The report condemned the closed shop and check off, and asserted compulsory government arbitration of labor disputes was "contrary to American principles." It urged "all laws against violence, intimidation and coercion in the field of labor relations should be vigorously enforced."

The report called for changes in anti-injunction laws to permit courts "to dispense preventive justice in labor disputes as well as in other fields of human conduct."
